The Hon. Amos J. Cummings, who is to succeed Sunset Cox in Congress, is a well known newspaper man, and was with Walker in Nicaragua.

Louisville is fortunate in the possession for a season of Theodore Thomas, Comedian Crane, Oliver Dowd Byron and other celebrities.

A schooner was capsized two miles at sea off Cape Henry, in the storm of Wednesday night, and the Captain by aid of a cork jacket swam ashore.

The Lexington Racing Association has decided to expend $80,000 in improvements before the next season. The weather last week was bad, but the attendance was good and some of the events were hotly contested.

Sunday was a day of fires. Selma, Alabama, lost $200,000, embracing an entire square; Decatur, Alabama, sustained a loss of $25,000; Huntington, W. Va., $20,000; and a steamship at the New Orleans wharf, $10,000 worth of cotton. A number of other places suffered seriously.

THE TENNESSEE STYLE.

Hancock county, Tennessee, has long been noted for bloody feuds, and not a man has ever been hung within its borders. But a great change is about to take place.

A year ago a man named Sutton was waylaid and killed. Five members of the Bernard family were arrested on suspicion, tried, found guilty, and sentenced to death. The cases were appealed, but the Supreme Court of that State has affirmed the decision of the lower court, and the five men are to be hung on the 25th of November.

At the same time of the lower court at which the five criminals were sentenced, another man was found guilty of murder, and also sentenced to death.

What a glorious record that court has made. A similar one by the court of Hancock county, in this State, would be an untold blessing. Hancock is the bloodiest county in Kentucky, and its career since the recent term of court, held by the aid of soldiers, has broken its former record. We hear that a law and order party has taken the matter in hand and killed off several tough parties. That is the only way to reform the county.

THE NAVASSA PRISONERS.

The U. S. man-of-war Galena has landed at Baltimore with the six ring leaders of the Navassa riot, and they have been placed in jail. The brig Romanca and Alvin with 150 of the miners are hourly expected.

The Galena brought also two witnesses. One of them states that Dr. Smith, the acting Surgeon-General, fired the first shot, wounding one Phillips, and that his act brought on the riot. It will be remembered that the miner Davidson stated that officer Jones fired the first shot wounding Phillips. Also that the preacher Henson stated that the miners assembled and demanded a hearing from Dr. Smith, and that "immediately the officers fired indiscriminately into the miners, wounding four men."

We observe that no two of the miners, even the friendly ones, tell the same story, while the officers are unanimous in the statement that mining boss Roby was assaulted at the works and left for dead, and the officer Jones was knocked down and an attempt made on his life when he went to arrest the man who assaulted Roby, and that the miners were the aggressors at every point. The Government will no doubt prove that to be the state of case, when the matter comes before the court.

THE CENTENNIAL OF KENTUCKY RACING.

Last Friday was the centennial of horse racing in Kentucky, and the day was noted at Lexington where the races were in progress. The centennial finds the interest in racing greater than ever before. More people are engaged in producing race horses, and racing them, than at any time in the history of the turf; more money is invested in that line, there are more race horses, and faster ones, and every reason exists that racing will continue to grow in importance and popularity.

The race horse is regarded more and more, not only as an animal of pleasure but of profit. Since the decadent days of the cattle and wheat interests in Kentucky, all eyes are turning to the fast horse as the fittest occupant of our broad and fertile fields.

The race track is a child of evolution. From a temporary and sequestered spot where only a certain class of men congregated under no particular authority, it has grown to a permanent place, set apart especially for the purpose, improved with the expenditure of thousands of dollars, conducted by thoroughly organized associations, and visited by the best classes of people.

There are elements in the soil of Central Kentucky that fit this production most peculiarly for the production of fast horses. Nowhere else do they grow to such perfection. Nowhere are there so many fine roads as we have, nor do there exist a people more capable of enjoying to the fullest extent fast horses and fine roads. Nor can we find a country more fitted to the eye than Central Kentucky, through which Central fine roads run, and in which these fast horses grow.

The Arab and his steed, immortalized in verse as endowed with Damosian and Pythian attributes, find a counter-part on every green field of Kentucky.

A DAUGHTER OF CONFEDERATE ADMIRAL SEMMES.

Happening the other day to be down to see a European steamer land her passengers, says the New York Times, I saw coming ashore a lady with a slight girlish figure, a pale, thoughtful, ethereal face and a brisk step. I recognized her as the widowed daughter of the late Capt. Semmes, of the Alabama, who was, after his defeat in the fight with the Kearsage, made an prisoner of the Confederates. The daughter is now the Principal of a large school in Mobile, where her brother, Olive Semmes, an artillery officer under Gen. Dick Taylor, is a Judge of one of the courts. The old Admiral's children are all tremendous workers.

made the following nominations, all of them being elected by the convention: President, C. L. Lewis, Lexington; Vice Presidents—J. Z. Tyler, Russell; R. T. Matthews; Recording Secretary—J. H. Hardin, Cincinnati; Treasurer—W. S. Dickinson, Cincinnati; Corresponding Secretary—A. McLean, President of Bethany College, W. Va.

At the conclusion of the addresses an appeal was made for donations to home missionary work, which was met with most gratifying results.

In a comparatively short time $10,500.25 was secured in pledges and cash, which exceeded the donations of the evening previous, which were thought to be unusually large.

The largest individual contribution was that of Judge Thomas F. Hargis, of Louisville, which was $5,000. However, $7,500 of this sum is to be used in building churches in the mountain districts of Southeastern Kentucky, and the remaining $500 to go to the general mission of the society.

The second largest donation was $2,500 by Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Phillips, of New Castle, Pa. The Franklin, Ky. Christian Church, $1,000; Fourth and Walnut-street Christian Church, Louisville, $500; Broadway Christian Church, Lexington, Ky., $500; Paris, Ky. Christian Church, $500.

The subscription for Kentucky churches alone amounted $1,800. The total amount of pledges and cash donations to all the missionary societies during the convention aggregated $35,045, exclusive of the $7,500 subscription from Judge Hargis, which was reserved for a special purpose.

tion as it is unwise. To discuss the moral and spiritual factors which enter into social and industrial questions is part of the exalted office of the church." Referring to false doctrines preached in the church, the letter repudiates peculiar doctrinal views presented by individuals as emanating from the entire body. The church should not be made responsible for unreasonable speculation both in the Holy Communion and other branches of the ritual. The letter closes with a passionate exhortation for the unity and loyalty of the people to the church.

In the autumn of 1789, two brothers, James and Samuel McElroy with their wives and little ones, came to visit their brother Hugh McElroy, he having the year previous settled where Springfield now is, they had come all the way from Campbell county, Va., by the way of Cumberland gap, and made this visit before going to their home beyond where Lebanon now stands. The three brothers, Hugh, James and Samuel, had married sisters, Estlin, Mary and Margaret Irvine. Their brother John who followed them to Kentucky died after a few years, unmarried. On the 16th of October, one hundred years later, the descendants of Hugh McElroy went over to join those of James and Samuel in the celebration of the day that marked the coming of their fathers.
